For nearly 14 years, Adriana Donohue has been one of the most familiar and beloved faces at the Hill House Firehouse. From art classes and Jumping Jacks Gym to cooking projects, science activities, and Kiddie Kamp in the summer, her goal has always been the same: make every child feel excited, supported, and included from the moment they walk through the door.

Working with children ages 1 to 7, Adriana has had the privilege of watching so many special moments unfold over the years. One of her favorites is when a baby recognizes her for the first time — and then getting to watch that same child grow into their own personality, interests, and confidence over the months and years that follow.

That kind of continuity is rare, and it's a big part of what makes Adriana's work at Hill House so meaningful. Every class brings something different, and she takes pride in creating spaces where children can explore creativity, movement, curiosity, and friendship in an environment that feels safe and caring every single time.

A NOTE FROM ADRIANA

"Every class brings something different, and I love creating experiences where children can explore creativity, movement, curiosity, and friendship in a safe and caring environment. I am proud to be part of a team that is passionate about supporting families and building a strong sense of community at Hill House every day."
