Ask anyone at Hill House what Ryan Moore's favorite program is and they'll tell you without hesitating: baseball. As someone who grew up loving the game, getting to build and run Hill House's baseball leagues was one of the most rewarding parts of his nearly four years here — from organizing the leagues and putting his own stamp on the schedule, to the moments on the field that remind him why it all matters.

The highlight came when Ryan had the chance to coach the Jumboshrimp — a group of boys he had coached the year before who graduated into the AAA baseball league together. Watching their progress week to week was something special. These weren't just kids learning to field a ground ball. They were developing confidence, competing with heart, and building friendships along the way. On a hot Saturday morning in June, that same group showed up and played back-to-back games to win the AAA championship. They weren't the favorites. They didn't care. They showed up, they competed, and they won — and Ryan got to be a small part of that.

A NOTE FROM RYAN

"If you want to get more involved — as a coach, a volunteer, or a donor — ask us how. We have a dedicated team ready to help you find the right fit, and we are more than happy to share what we do and work with you. Hill House is your backyard in the city, and there's always room for more people in it."
